POHWER goes after Neponset River pollution

Christopher Roberson
Staff Reporter

The contaminants in the Neponset River have continued to detract from the ongoing efforts to assist property owner Todd Finard in completing the Shops at Riverwood.

Therefore, People of Hyde Park Want Equal Representation (POHWER), which operates under the purview of the Southwest Boston Community Development Corporation (SWBCDC), will be hosting a neighborhood forum to discuss the problem in greater detail. The meeting will be held at 892 River St. on June 28 at 6:30 p.m.

SWBCDC Community Organizer Alexander Nadel said that with the Neponset running directly behind the plaza, Finard would ideally like to have riverside dining available for patrons. However, that simply is not possible right now with the current pollution levels.

During the June 1 meeting of the Hyde Park Neighborhood Association, Nadel said polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), sewerage and dumping are the top three contributors to the pollution in that part of the river.

Although sewerage and dumping can be somewhat controlled, Nadel said the same is not true for PCBs.

Renovation plan for Parkman Playground presented

Matthew MacDonald
Staff Reporter

The Boston Parks and Recreation Department held its third community meeting regarding its renovation project for Jamaica Plain’s Parkman Playground last Thursday.

This was the last of three meetings, the goal of which was for the designers – of Crosby, Schlessinger, Smallridge – to present a renovation plan based on local residents’ input.

The meeting, held in the park pavilion, made it much easier for the small group of neighborhood residents in attendance to relate aspects of the renovation diagram to the conditions around them.

The proposed design takes advantage of the site’s natural slope, while also trying to maximize the play equipment budget (the total amount for design fees and construction is $1.74 million).

The interior of the playground will be sectioned off into terraces, with a meandering path leading from the Wachusett Street entrance (which will remain in place) connecting them to each other.

To the right of the main pathway will be a play structure designed for 5 to 12-year-olds (lower terrace/Wachusett Street), and another designed for 2 to 5-year-olds (middle terrace/current pavilion area). A small splash area is also planned for

BPDA proposed instituting an Interim Planning Overlay District in South Boston

Matthew Allen
Student Intern

The Boston Planning and Development Agency (BPDA) proposed instituting an Interim Planning Overlay District (IPOD) in South Boston at a public meeting held at Tynan Elementary School last Wednesday.

An Interim Planning Overlay District would overlay on top of existing zoning in South Boston for one year, and would require anyone who is attempting to build a multi-unit building to get an additional conditional use variance.

Article 27S is the IPOD bill proposal. If it were to be approved by the Boston Zoning Commission, it means that any proposed projects in South Boston that are erect-

Opening day of the 32nd Annual RVMS Farmers Market a great success

Hundreds came out to celebrate opening day of Roslindale's Farmers Market along with Green Mobility Day at Adams Park on June 3. The combined event, coordinated by Roslindale Village Main Street, was a huge success.

"In Roslindale, what makes this farmers market different than so many of the others is that every single person from the community comes out. I know 50 faces in the crowd right now," said Emmy Smela, manager of Roslindale Farmers Market.

Richard Chalfin, Co-Chairman of the Roslindale Farmers Market, expressed how wonderful being a part of the market is.

"What I love is the wonderful fresh fruits from the farms just outside the city and all the other wonderful vendors of fruit products, craft vendors and nonprofits," Chalfin said. "Just meeting more and more people from my own neighborhood, becoming acquaintances, becoming friends, it's a wonderful experience."

The Roslindale Farmers Market is held every Saturday, June through November, just as it has for the last 32 years. Most of the sponsors are neighborhood businesses.

"We try to keep it pretty local," Smela said.

The entertainment was also provided by local artists, such as returning favorite

Residents, society members, and tourists join the Santa Maria Di Anzano Procession

Ariane Komyati
Staff Reporter

Despite the looming rain, residents of the North End, Church and Madonna Di Anzano Society members, and tourists came together to watch the first Santa Maria Di Anzano procession of the season.

The celebration usually begins at Saint Leonard Church, but due to renovations, the service was held at Sacred Heart Church down the street.

The procession celebrates the Madonna (a picture or statue of the Virgin Mary), which was discovered 400 years ago in a small village in Italy now known as Anzano.

In 1905, 10 immigrants from Anzano formed the Madonna Di Anzano Society. The society was originally founded to assist other immigrants who came from Italy to the United States. In the North End, the feast is celebrated the first weekend in June.

The legend of the Madonna states that a young farmer's cow had wondered away, and as he was searching for it, he happened upon some shrubs. The farmer noticed a beam of light shining through, which came from the image of Mary. The Madonna is now celebrated in both Italy and the North End.

Elio Lorusso, the President of the Madonna Di Anzano Society, helped prepare the procession along with other members.

"We are celebrating our 112th anniversary," he explained. "Everything is going smoothly so far."

After the noon Mass, the procession began at 1 p.m.

The Madonna was brought outside as many gathered to take her photo. The North End Marching Band played both the Italian and United States national anthems, followed by confetti and fireworks. The American and Italian flags led the Madonna through the North End streets with the marching band playing behind them.

Many people followed the parade, as the band

NEEDLE AND THE DAMAGE DONE

Day after day we hear about the tragedy of opioid addiction and the overdoses that have claimed so many lives.

So many well-meaning efforts have, sadly, failed to stem the tide. Finding solutions is no easy task. Nevertheless, throwing irrational ideas into the ring will help no one in the long run.

We are not totally dismissive of the latest opioid-related plan put forth by some City Councilors; a city-established safe space where heroin users could self-inject. Neither are we swayed into thinking it is the right approach.

Providing such a space would in theory offer many benefits. Libraries, hospitals, parks, and public bathrooms would be less a danger zone of drug activity and junkie-obstructed obstacle course for visitors. Medical staff would be ready to spring into action if there is an overdose or bad reaction. Clean needles would be available. Counselors would be at the ready to help secure rehabilitation services for those who want it.

With 2,100 opiate-related deaths in Massachusetts last year, expect to hear plenty about this and similar plans in the weeks ahead.

Senator Joe Boncore, a Democrat serving Winthrop, is among those promoting the idea before the State Legislature, with the support of the Massachusetts Medical Society and other health-related concerns.

Parts of Europe and Canada already have self-injection sites and claim double-digit death reductions. New York is considering safe self-injection sites and Seattle has had them since January.

Saving lives is what is important here, so it probably seems callous to speak against a plan with documented successes elsewhere. The idea, however, gnaws at us.

The solution to tobacco use in Boston was to ban it nearly citywide. No “safe space” for nicotine addicts was ever considered like a “smoking lounge” on government property. Will cocaine aficionados be given the chance to snort a line or two in the safe confines of City Hall? To stop the spread of aids, perhaps prostitutes can take “johns” to specially designated cots made available at local libraries.

Facetiousness aside, addiction is a disease and a terrible thing, but let’s stop overlooking personal responsibility. Even with the many drugs available (many with minimal dangers) a great number of people are choosing the most dangerous drugs ever created. Is there a soul on earth who doesn’t know of the instant danger and prospect of addiction that comes with heroin?

Let’s stop diversionary tactics about legal painkillers and peer pressure. A person who begins using heroin has made a conscious choice. They do so because it is cheap, fast, intense, and readily available. They do so because they don’t care about the dangers. Yet, we are expected to say: “Oh, no worries, let us help you find a comfy place to do your thing.”

Instead of heroin clubhouses, greater resources are needed to assist law enforcement efforts. The “war on drugs” has had mixed results, but who could argue that every syringe taken off the street could mean one less death on the sidewalk?

Beyond the queasiness we feel for mollycoddling addicts in public spaces with taxpayer dollars, there are logistical hurdles to consider. With a new hardline stance at the Department of Justice, harboring drug activity is a federal crime. Also, in a city where even a pizza place proposal draws the wrath of its neighbors, how is it even conceivable that a site for a self-injection site could be agreed upon by everybody?

No one wants to live next to a facility where heroin users might be lining up down the block.

What message does all of this this send to kids? “Don’t worry; we’ll make drug use easy, safe and convenient!”

We applaud creative thinking in the war against drugs and addiction. We must ensure, however, that perceived solutions don’t make the problem worse in the long run.

A silver lining to Hurricane Sandy?

Mention Hurricane Sandy to anybody living along the eastern seaboard and horrific stories will soon follow. This is especially true for inhabitants of New York City and New Jersey.

But the other day, a newspaper story delineated a good effect – a veritable silver lining – from that terrible storm. No, it was not the rebuilding of the amusement parks or famous boardwalks for which the Jersey Shore is known. But close.

It seems that the federal Army Corps of Engineers aided in the rebuilding of the dunes along the 127-mile shoreline. One of the obligations of benefitting from taxpayer-funded beach reconstruction is ensuring that those beaches can be accessed by taxpayers, regardless of where they live. Thus, inland inhabitants not residing in the tiny towns along the Jersey Shore have a right to access the beaches that their tax dollars helped recreate. Beach parking and pathways to the beach have to be accessible.

My Kind of Town/
Joe Galeota

Meanwhile, here in Boston, architects and city planners are arguing over a few hundred feet for the public’s right to see the Atlantic, especially in the Seaport District.

Across the rest of the state’s 1,500-mile coastline, day-trippers from Boston are thwarted year-in and year-out, decade-in and decade-out, from parking anywhere near the coast by “resident only” stickers. Or where non-townies have access, such as Gloucester’s Good Harbor Beach, only a small portion of the parking lot is set aside for visitors and for a much higher price.

And don’t you ever think of walking at low tide across beachfront owners’ property. It’s illegal, unless such a walker is fishing or fowling. Unlike in other states, such property goes to the low-water mark.

A number of years ago at the height of his senatorial power, Sen. Bulger, shooed off a Cape Cod beach by an ocean-front owner, tried to amend the law to declare “high water/tide” mark, but a cadre of officials from beach communities defeated his just and fair proposal.

So those of us not living in well-to-do beach communities are restricted for yet another summer to wiggling our toes only in a scant a couple of miles of overcrowded waters at Salisbury, Revere, Orient Heights, Constitution, Orient, Tenean, Mailibu, Carson, Wollaston, Nantasket, Scusset, and Horseneck beaches, as well as the now packed National Seashore beaches on Cape Cod.

LEON TRIBUTE WAS WONDERFUL

To the Editor:

The Judie Leon Celebration of Life Tribute held on May 19, 2017, was sponsored by The Roslindale Board of Trade and Roslindale Community. It was a wonderful event and so well attended. Recognition for those part of the Judie Leon Celebration Committee, who tirelessly volunteered for months to make this a successful evening were: Michael Tobin, Lisa Modecker, Linda Burnett, John Sullivan, Warren Frank, Terry Fitzgerald, Billy Quarterone and Rob Norberg.

The Members of the Committee want to thank everyone for coming to the event and to Judie’s Family for embracing the celebration and being an active part of the festivities.

Special Thanks to a few who made the event ever so special by not only attending, but by being shining stars at the Tribute; we thank you Glenn Williams for donating his time to set the festive tone by serving as the DJ for this event. Special Kudos to Warren Frank and Steve O’Malley, the tireless Chefs who worked behind the scenes to create an amazing menu for this event. The generous monetary donation from Alan McKinnon of the Gardens at Gethsemane and for allowing us to use two projectors that portrayed a fun array of Judie pictures throughout the night.

We give thanks to The Cooperative Bank that not only filled a table but helped to promote Judie’s Tribute. The Roslindale/

West Roxbury Kiwanis for their contribution and for their much appreciated support. Ken & Janice Cunningham for their very generous show of support. The folks from Insight Realty for their donation. The Roslindale Business Group for the much needed first big donation and their willingness to help with the raffle and promotion of Judie’s Celebration. The Greater Roslindale Health Organization for bringing so many to the party. We thank the local businesses from both the Roslindale and West Roxbury community for generously donating raffle gifts and vouchers, reminding us of one of Judie’s favorite sayings, just how important it is to “shop locally.” Krupa Insurance for a great donation and a full table of supportive members from the Community. Kudos to all those who brought Judie’s memory to life by standing up and sharing a story or kind words about Judie, it meant so much that you spoke up. We all have a Judie story and sharing them is a great way to honor her life.

Thanks to City Counselor Tim McCarthy; State Rep. Liz Malia, Msgr. Kelly from Sacred Heart and local businessman Joe Porteleki for their many kind words. We salute all those in the Roslindale/Parkway Community who attended Judie’s Tribute and made it such a memorable one. Judie would have been so humbled to see all the lives she improved and all the friendships

The BPDA’s proposal of an IPOD is an attempt to combat some of the growing issues caused by existing building zoning laws, such as the lack of parking in South Boston and the issue of single and two-family units being replaced by multi-unit buildings, which is leading to a higher residential density in the area.

Community Affairs Liaison Mark McGonagle said that South Boston has been a hotbed of residential development in recent years, and that this is one reason for the IPOD being a necessity.

“We commonly use IPODs when neighborhoods are going through zoning and/or planning transitions,” McGonagle said. “South Boston is absolutely doing that. We at BPDA have poured more planning resources into South Boston over the past three years than any other neighborhood, without a doubt.”

At-Large City Councilor Michael Flaherty said that the IPOD overlay would hopefully combat some of the development madness that has consumed a lot of South Boston in recent years.

“An IPOD overlay would stop the craziness, stop the feeding frenzy, and would stop these single and two-family homes from being flipped,” Flaherty said. “It’s unacceptable, it’s not a good quality of life, and we didn’t want to see the whole neighborhood bulldozed.”

Some neighborhood residents still had concerns even after the IPOD suggestion by the BPDA. While the IPOD could potentially halt future residential development projects, or limit them in size, it would do nothing to address the already existing issues created by recently constructed residential units.

Tia Zaferakis, a South Boston resident, said that with the vast amount of residential units constructed in recent years, how could these projects be viewed by anyone in South Boston as beneficial to the neighborhood, and be allowed to continue in any away?

“If you take a radius of Farragut Road to P Street, which is one block, my neighborhood has now transformed over 250 units,” Zaferakis said. “At what point are we trying to preserve the integrity of the neighborhood?”

McGonagle also wanted to remind the South Boston residents attending this meeting that the IPOD is still pending approval from the Boston Zoning Commission.

McGonagle said that anyone can attend the zoning commission hearing that will pertain to the approval of Article 27S.

“Zoning commission hearings are always public hearings, so keep that in mind,” McGonagle said. “If we bring this IPOD proposal to the Boston Zoning Commission, it will be a public hearing. Everyone is allowed to attend and speak in favor, or against.”

Davey the Clown, a Roslindale resident. Davey put on a performance for the children who attended, performing juggling acts, tricks and stunts while engaging the audience.

The opening day also featured Green Mobility Day, which is a special event to help encourage those who can to bike or walk instead of driving to their destination.

Green Mobility Day was organized by Rozzie Bikes, a neighborhood organization devoted to making the Roslindale neighborhood of Boston a better place to bike, as explained on their website, Rozziebikes.org.

“We wanted to raise awareness with the mayor, knowing his constituents walk, bike and use public transportation every day, so this is a great opportunity,” said Laura Smeaton, a representative of Rozzie Bikes. “It’s such a wonderful day to really pair with Roslindale Village Main Streets to do that.”

Boston Mayor Martin Walsh also attended the event. He was awarded a Green Mobility award for his role in elevating active transportation.

“I think that we all have to live together on the roads,” Walsh said. “We need our bicycles, we need our walkers we need our cars.”

He continued to explain that in today’s world, we have multiple modes of transportation and we have to be very careful of each other.

“We have to work together, because what we want to do is cut down on gas and emissions, and we want to reduce our carbon and be carbon neutral by 2050,” he said.

Walsh asserted that we cannot attain carbon neutrality by increasing cars on the road. He explained that the goal of becoming carbon neutral by 2050 is only attainable if we increase pedestrians and bicyclists.

“This will give us the ability to move our infrastructure forward, that’s how we do it,” he said.

Opening Day presented so many vendors selling an array of items, including plaster from Big Wally’s Plaster Magic to dried fruit nut mix by All Fruit Inc.

The park was filled from one direction to the other with hundreds of people and local vendors.

Chalfin explained that the farmers market has been such a great success for Roslindale that they’ve also started a Winters Market, which have been running for several years now.

“I hope that other farmers markets throughout the city of Boston will become established as time goes on,” she said.

the middle terrace.

The upper third of the playground – currently unused and running between the basketball court and the parking lot, up to the cemetery – will be used for a mini-basketball court and a tricycle loop area between that and the cemetery.

The left side of the main pathway – largely unused – will have a slide mound and swing area in the lower section approaching the bench area of the softball field. Additionally, a new pavilion – about half the size of the current one – and an adult fitness area will be built near the basketball court.

A perimeter fence will wind its way along Wachusett Street and then recede several paces back from the main entrance, to a hinged gate, before continuing around the playground until it joins to the basketball court fence.

Taken as a compromise solution to the potential problem of unleashed dogs accessing the play area, the fence design grants both playground visitors and dog walkers access from Wachusett Street, while also, according to lead designer Josh Burgel, making the entrance more inviting.

“Right now, it sort of turns its back on the street and is separate,” he said. “We’d like to make this playground more welcoming to people coming in.”

The current plan proposes to leave all trees in place, as well as shrubbery acting as exterior buffers. Interior shrubs, however, are slated for removal, as they – according to Mr. Burgel – “make a small park seem even smaller.”

According to the current plan, the 5 to 12-year-old play area will be lowered in order to allow any incoming play structure to be accessed from the second terrace.

Potential structures range in size and complexity. BPR Design and Construction Manager Nathan Frazee spoke of these options.

“We’re looking at structures that are challenging, are a little scary – but certainly safe – and allow kids to experience the park in a different way, multiple times,” he said.

The design will go out to bid this summer, with construction scheduled to begin in the fall, and the re-opening anticipated for next spring. Additional information can be found at: <https://www.boston.gov/departments/parks-and-recreation/improvements-parkman-playground>.

deeper and will require the state and a stload of funding,” he said.

Association President Barbara Baxter strongly advised against direct physical contact with the river.

“It’s a very seriously polluted place,” she said. “People are still dumping in there, it’s very frustrating.”

In addition, resident Martha McDonough said the Boston Water and Sewer Commission (BWSC) recently reported 80,000 colony-forming units (CFUs) of E. coli in the section of river behind the intersection of Chittick Road and Truman Parkway.

“Eighty thousand is extreme; it’s really bad, it’s not a low number,” McDonough said following the meeting, adding that any CFU count above 230 is a cause for concern.

She said the astronomically high count has been caused by “illicit [pipe] connections,” many of which were installed more than 86 years ago.

“A lot of these pipes were put in before Truman was built,” said McDonough.

However, the BWSC was ordered by the court to fix the connections, which have been funneling sewerage into the Neponset.

Although the project is not yet completed, McDonough said she is confident that the BWSC is working diligently to rectify the problem.

In other news, Police Officer Linda Stanford spoke about the new Overdose Squad within the Police Department’s Drug Control Unit.

“The body count is rising and it’s getting worse,” she said.

Stanford also said the court can require an individual struggling with substance abuse to be put into a treatment program.

Chapter 123 Section 35 of the Massachusetts General Laws states: “If, after a hearing which shall include expert testimony and may include other evidence, the court finds that such person is an individual with an alcohol or substance use disorder and there is a likelihood of serious harm as a result of the person’s alcohol or substance use disorder, the court may order such person to be committed for a period not to exceed 90 days to a facility designated by the Department of Public Health.”

Yet, even under such circumstances, Stanford said the individual would not be in police custody.

“The person isn’t under arrest; you have to remember, these people are the victims,” she said.

Two officials from the Fire

Department’s Fire Investigation Unit were also on hand to discuss the 20 building fires that have broken out in Hyde Park since January.

They said two of the main causes are “the careless disposal of smoking materials” and cooking.

“People come home from work, put something in the stove, and they fall asleep,” said one of the officials.

Although those fires tend be smaller in size, he said they still cause at least $10,000 in damage.

The official also said that simple household clutter often becomes an accelerant.

“People don’t know how to throw anything away, so these fires just take off,” he said.

For fires caused by cigarettes, both officials agreed that people attempt to extinguish cigarettes by putting them in the soil of a flowerpot only to find out later that it was not soil, but flammable recyclable material.

While presenting the police report for the past month, Officer Paul Broderick said there were three assaults, six larcenies, one robbery, two vandalisms, two reports of drug activity as well as one report of breaking and entering.

We are pleased to announce that Dr. Carolyn Walsh has joined the clinical staff at Hyde Park Pediatrics on March 1, 2017. Dr. Walsh is a summa cum laude graduate of Barnard College. She attended Harvard Medical School and trained in the Combined Residency Program in Pediatrics at Boston Medical Center and Children’s Hospital. Following residency, Dr. Walsh provided pediatric primary care at the East Boston Neighborhood Health Center. Dr. Walsh is pleased to accept and welcome all new families to our practice.

stopped at a few local restaurants, such as Pagliuca’s and Regina’s Pizzeria, to perform for their guests. “These restaurants donated to the societies, so the band plays during the parade for them,” explained John Norris, Vice President of the Madonna Di Anzano Society. “It is a way of saying thank you.” Many residents came to donate money to the Madonna, some people even throwing their money out of windows, to give back to the church.

At 6 p.m., the Madonna arrived back at the Sacred Heart Church. This parade marks the beginning of the feast season in the North End, which will continue throughout the summer and some of the fall.

WE CAN SUPPORT CLIMATE EFFORTS LOCALLY

To the Editor:
The Paris Climate Accord is an unprecedented opportunity for international cooperation toward planetary survival, by reducing the greenhouse gas emissions that cause climate change. Since President Trump has shortsightedly withdrawn from this agreement, we must take upon ourselves the responsibility for pursuing its goals. Governors and mayors are pledging action on the state and local level. Individual citizens are stepping up, too.

One thing Parkway residents can do right now is support Community Choice Energy (CCE) for Boston. CCE means that a city chooses a broker to buy electricity in bulk for all of its residents and businesses. Many neighboring towns already have CCE plans where electricity costs about the same as usual, but where more of it comes from renewable sources than is currently required by law. This means less greenhouse gas is released to make the electricity. (For more information, see communitychoiceboston.org, a website developed by a local non-profit.)

City Councilors Matt O’Malley and Michelle Wu are co-sponsoring an initiative to bring CCE to Boston, and discussions about it are underway at City Hall. Please contact Mayor Walsh (617-635-4500 or mayor@boston.gov) and tell him you support Community Choice Energy. Fighting global warming is up to us, and CCE is one important step.

MEMORIAL DAY IS MUCH MORE THAN A CHANCE TO BARBEQUE

To the Editor:
Good Morning: I bring you greetings from President Cheryl and all the members of the American Legion Auxiliary, with a special reminder today, of why we should never forget: Another Memorial Day is here. Maybe you put flowers and flags on a relative’s gravesite or watched your kids wave flags in a parade. You may have slept late or rose from bed early to get here, to prep for a barbeque. It is often said, but is worth repeating, that Memorial Day has, sadly, become more about the start of summer than the day of reflection, that is was intended. It is just sad that for many, thinking solemnly about or men and women who gave their lives in the Armed Forces is limited to just two days of the year; Memorial Day and Veterans Day. And regarding Memorial Day, for those of you who are too young to remember, some of us used to call it Decoration Day. It all started in 1868 when relatives of the Union Soldiers placed flowers to decorate the graves of those who died in the Civil War. Memorial Day did not become the more common name until after World War II, and was not declared the official name by federal Law until 1967, and to be celebrated on the last Monday in May for all armed services and wars as a national holiday.

TARGET IS NOT A THREAT

To the Editor:
As a former Roslindale resident, I often tried to shop down in and around Roslindale Square in support of the local retail community. However, I found the news that Target had targeted this retail area for its newest store plenty good news. With Staples leaving the site of the former Ashmont Discount store, I thought quickly filling the void with another retailer should have been considered positive news for all.

I was not surprised to hear that the owner of the Roslindale Village Market wasn’t that happy over Target moving in down the street from his market. He saw the grocery section inside the Target as a threat to his business. Others didn’t like the idea of a CVS Pharmacy inside the Target store, too.

I do not think Target coming into the area is any kind of “corporate gentrification.” I don’t see it as pushing out the vitality of local businesses that have built up the area in the past 20 years or so.

While living in Roslindale, I did shop time to time down at the village market, but not that often because it doesn’t offer enough items that the larger supermarkets offer. Roslindale, down toward Forest Hills, has the village market and the Harvest Co-op. Many residents often drive to West Roxbury to purchase most of their groceries and any time another choice enters the picture, it should be and will be welcomed by those who go shopping. Competition is always good for prices as is the convenience of new source to buy groceries.

Finally, I shop in Target all the time but rarely, if ever, buy my groceries there. No one is going to be forced to buy groceries sold at Target, but it being there might help some shoppers. Target can only stimulate the local economy of the retail stores already around the square. We need to stop being afraid of change. Target is not the enemy of anyone.

not have been happier with the turnout.

“On behalf of my family and the Corrib Charitable Trust, I would like to thank the West Roxbury community, the runners, the sponsors and especially the volunteers,” he said. “We couldn’t do it without you.”

Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker, who attended the event, said he was amazed at the charitable work done in West Roxbury through the event. But he also asked the crowd for a moment of silence in remembrance of two local firefighters who lost their lives in a 2014 Back Bay Fire; recently, the tot lot on Billings Field was rededicated to their memories.

“I do want to take a second to remember the Tot Lot over there, which is dedicated to Lt. Ed Walsh and Firefighter Michael Kennedy, and if you could all give a moment of silence I’d appreciate that,” Baker said. “This community of West Roxbury is just such a wonderful place, I got a lot of good friends here and I really admire and appreciate what you guys do here for one another.”

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh said the event is a mainstay for the Parkway community and he wouldn’t miss it for anything, though he said he could not run in the race this year.

“I want to thank the Bligh family for the great work that they do in this neighborhood and in the City of Boston every single year, the money they raise and the charities they support,” he said. “I want to wish you all a great race today. I would be running in this race, but unfortunately I have to go do the Dorchester Day Parade, so I’m going to let one of you guys win.”

District 6 City Councilor Matt O’Malley said he’s run the race so many times, he’s not exactly sure of the real number now.

“At least 15 times,” he said. “I don’t know exactly how many times I’ve run it.”

O’Malley said the event has become the de facto celebration of West Roxbury as a community.

“We don’t have our own parade like we used to years and years ago, and this really has become the celebration of the neighborhood,” he said. “I see guys and girls that I grew up with who moved out and come back just to run this. It’s really one of my favorite days of the year.”

Resident Brian Bresnahan said he’s run the race a few times, but has been coming to the event since he was a kid.

“I grew up here in West Roxbury, now I want to make sure that I’m here for my family and for a beautiful day,” he said.

Many residents came out to run and support their own charities during the road race. Chef’s Table co-founder Carol O’Connor said she was racing to help the organization raise funds for scholarships for homeless veterans and underprivileged youths. She said this was her first time running for the Chef’s Table, but added she has had some previous experience with the route.

“In the last 24 years, this is my eighth time,” she said. “I enjoy the workout, but also just to support the community where I grew up. The Chef’s Table Foundation has a team to support the foundation at the Corrib 5K this year, it’s our first time doing it and we hope we can raise funds.”

Several dozen women were running for the Run Like a Mother organization, which was fundraising this year for the Hope and Comfort group, which distributes toiletries for homeless families. Run Like a Mother member Antoinette Hemphill said the local group has really started to hit its stride in the community.

“The first year we did the Corrib we had about a dozen of us but now we have a big team,” she said.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
(Never known to fail!)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and it will be granted to you.
Grateful thanks. —C.H.
