POHWER goes after Neponset River pollution

Christopher Roberson
Staff Reporter

The contaminants in the Neponset River have continued to detract from the ongoing efforts to assist property owner Todd Finard in completing the Shops at Riverwood. Therefore, People of Hyde Park Want Equal Representation (POHWER), which operates under the purview of the Southwest Boston Community Development Corporation (SWBCDC), will be hosting a neighborhood forum to discuss the problem in greater detail. The meeting will be held at 892 River St. on June 28 at 6:30 p.m.

The POHWER forum is part of a larger campaign to address the issue of Neponset River pollution in that part of the river. Although sewerage and dumping are the top three contributors to the pollution, chlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), a toxic chemical used in the past, are also a significant concern. Nadel said the same is not true for PCBs.

Residents, society members, and tourists join the Santa Maria Di Anzano Procession

Ariane Komyati
Staff Reporter

Despite the looming rain, residents of the North End, Church and Madonna Di Anzano Society members, and tourists came together to watch the first Santa Maria Di Anzano procession of the season.

The celebration usually begins at Saint Leonard Church, but due to renovations, the service was held at Sacred Heart Church down the street.

The procession celebrates the Madonna (a picture or statue of the Virgin Mary), which was discovered 400 years ago in a small village in Italy now known as Anzano.

In 1905, 10 immigrants from Anzano formed the Madonna Di Anzano Society. The society was originally founded to assist other immigrants who came from Italy to the United States. In the North End, the procession is celebrated the first weekend in June.

The legend of the Madonna states that a young farmer’s cow had wandered away, and as he was searching for it, he happened upon some shrubs. The farmer noticed a beam of light shining through, which came from the image of Mary. The Madonna is now celebrated in both Italy and the North End.

Elio Lorusso, the President of the Madonna Di Anzano Society, helped prepare the procession along with other members.

“We are celebrating our 112th anniversary,” he explained. “Everything is going smoothly so far.”

After the noon Mass, the procession began at 1 p.m.

Residents flocked to the North End for the first of what will be dozens of feast parades throughout the summer.

The Madonna was brought outside as many gathered to take her photo. The North End Marching Band played both the Italian and United States national anthems, followed by confetti and fireworks. The American and Italian flags led the Madonna through the North End streets with the marching band playing behind them.

Many people followed the parade, as the band marched.

LEON TRIBUTE WAS WONDERFUL
To the Editor: The Judie Leon Celebration of Life Tribute held on May 19, 2017, was sponsored by The Roslindale Board of Trade and Roslindale Community. It was a wonderful event and so well attended. Recognition for those part of the Judie Leon Celebration Committee was much deserved. We were honored to meet so many of Judie’s friends and neighbors today. Special thanks to Warren Tobin, Lisa Modecker, Linda Burnett, John Sullivan, Warren Frank, Steve O’Malley, Frank and Steve O’Malley, Amos Krupa, Mike Krupa, Joanne Malia, Msgr. Kelly from Sacred Heart and local businessman Joe Galeota. It seems that the federal government was again the right approach.

Providing a space where addicts could be provided clean needles would be available where necessary. Caregivers would be there to help addicts and to ensure that they get the help they need. This would be an effective way of reducing the number of drug-related deaths.

The Judie Leon Celebration of Life Tribute was an event to honor and remember a wonderful woman who made a difference in the lives of many people. It was a great way to come together and remember her legacy.

The BPDA’s proposal of an IPOD is an attempt to combat some of the growing issues caused by existing building zoning laws, such as the lack of parking in South Boston and the issue of single and two-family units being replaced by multi-unit buildings, which is leading to a higher residential density in the area.

Community Affairs Liaison Mark McGonagle said that South Boston has been a hotbed of residential development in recent years, and that this is one reason for the IPOD being a necessity.

"I don’t commonly use IPODs when neighborhoods are going through zoning and/or planning transitions,” McGonagle said. "South Boston is absolutely doing that. We at BPDA have poured more planning resources into South Boston over the past three years than any other neighborhood, without a doubt."

At-Large City Councillor Michael Flaherty said that the IPOD overlay would hopefully combat some of the development madness that has consumed a lot of South Boston in recent years.

"An IPOD overlay would stop the craziness, stop the feeding frenzy, and would stop these single and two-family homes from being flipped,” Flaherty said. "It’s unacceptable, it’s not a good quality of life, and we didn’t want to see the whole neighborhood bulldozed."

Some neighborhood residents still had concerns even after the IPOD suggestion by the BPDA. While the IPOD could potentially halt future residential development projects, or limit them in size, it would do nothing to address the already existing issues created by recently constructed residential units.

Tia Zaferakis, a South Boston resident, said that with the vast amount of residential units constructed in recent years, how could these projects be viewed by anyone in South Boston as beneficial to the neighborhood, and be allowed to continue in any way?

"If you take a radius of Farragut Road to P Street, which is one block, my neighborhood has now transformed over 250 units," Zaferakis said.

"At what point are we trying to preserve the integrity of the neighborhood?"

McGonagle also wanted to remind the South Boston residents attending this meeting that the IPOD is still pending approval from the Boston Zoning Commission.

McGonagle said that anyone can attend the zoning commission hearing that will per-tain to the approval of Article 278.

"Zoning commission hear-ings are always public hear-ings, so keep that in mind," McGonagle said. "If we bring this IPOD proposal to the Boston Zoning Commission, it will be a public hearing. Everyone is allowed to attend and speak in favor, or against." Market continued from page 2

Davye the Clown, a Roslindale resident. Davye put on a performance for the children who attended, per-forming juggling acts, tricks and stunts while engaging the audience.

The opening day also featured Green Mobility Day, a special event to help encourage those who can to bike or walk instead of driv-ing to their destination.

Green Mobility Day was organized by Roszie Bikes, a neighborhood organization devoted to making the Roslindale neighborhood of Boston a better place to bike, as explained on their website, Rozziebikes.org.

"We wanted to raise awareness with the mayor, knowing his constituents walk, bike and use public transportation every day, so this is a great opportunity," said Laura Smeaton, a representative of Roszie Bikes. "It’s such a wonderful day to really pair with Roslindale Village Main Streets to do that."

Boston Mayor Martin Walsh also attended the event. He was awarded a Green Mo-bility award for his role in el-evating active transportation. He said, "I think that we all have to live together on the roads," Walsh said. "We need our bi-cycles, we need our walkers, we need our cars."

He continued to explain that in today’s world, we have multiple modes of transporta-tion and we have to be very careful of each other.

"We have to work together, because what we want to do is cut down on gas and emis-sions, and we want to reduce our carbon and be carbon neu-tral by 2050," he said.

Walsh asserted that we cannot attain carbon neutral-ity by increasing cars on the road. He explained that the road of Roslindale Green Mobility neutral by 2050 is only attainable if we increase pedestrians and bicyclists.

"It will give all the ability to move our infrastructure forward, that’s what we do it," he said.

Opening Day presented so many vendors selling an array of items, including plaster from Big Wally’s Plaster Magic to dried fruit nut mix by All Fruit Inc.

Chalfin explained that the farmers market has been such a great success for Roslindale that they’ve also started a Win-ters Market, which has been running for several years now.

“I hope that other farmers markets throughout the city of Boston will become established as time goes on," she said.

According to the current plan, the 5 to 12-year-old play area will be lowered in order to allow any incoming play structures to be accessed from the second terrace.

Potential structures range in size and complexity. BPR Design and Construction Manager Nathan Frazee spoke of these options.

"We’re looking at structures that are challenging, are a little scary — but certainly safe — and allow kids to use the sand in the park in a different way, multiple times," he said.

The design will go on to bid in the current, with construction scheduled to begin in the fall, and the re-opening anticipated for next spring. Additional information can be found at: https://www.boston.gov/departments/parks-and-recreation/improve-ments/parkman-playground.
deeper and will require the state and a "cloud of funding," he said.

Association President Barbara Baxter strongly advised against direct physical contact with the river.

"It's a very seriously polluted place," she said. "People are still dumping in there; it's very frustrating."

In addition, resident Martha McDonough said the Boston Water and Sewer Commission (BWSC) recently reported 80,000 colony-forming units (CFUs) of E. coli in the section of river behind the intersection of Chittick Road and Truman Parkway.

"Eighty thousand is extreme; it's really bad, it's not a low number," McDonough said following the meeting, adding that any CFU count above 230 is a cause for concern.

She said the astronomically high count has been caused by "illicit [pipe] connections," many of which were installed more than 86 years ago.

"A lot of these pipes were put in before Truman was built," said McDonough.

However, the BWSC was ordered by the court to fix the connections, which have been funneling sewerage into the Neponset.

Although the project is not yet completed, McDonough said she is confident that the BWSC is working diligently to rectify the problem.

"It's a massive project," she said.

In other news, Police Officer Linda Stanford spoke about the new Overdose Squad within the Police Department's Drug Control Unit.

"The body count is rising and it's getting worse," she said.

Stanford also said the court can require an individual struggling with substance abuse to be put into a treatment program.

Chapter 123 Section 35 of the Massachusetts General Laws states: "If, after a hearing which shall include expert testimony and may include other evidence, the court finds that such person is an individual with an alcohol or substance use disorder and there is a likelihood of serious harm as a result of the person's alcohol or substance use disorder, the court may order such person to be committed for a period not to exceed 90 days to a facility designated by the Department of Public Health."

Yet, even under such circumstances, Stanford said the individual would not be in police custody.

"The person isn't under arrest; you have to remember, these people are the victims," she said.

Two officials from the Fire Department's Fire Investigation Unit were also on hand to discuss the 20 building fires that have broken out in Hyde Park since January.

They said two of the main causes are "the careless disposal of smoking materials" and cooking.

"People come home from work, put something in the stove, and they fall asleep," said one of the officials.

Although those fires tend be smaller in size, they said they still cause at least $10,000 in damage.

The official also said that simple household clutter often becomes an accelerant.

"People don't know how to throw anything away, so these fires just take off," he said.

For fires caused by cigarettes, both officials agreed that people attempt to extinguish

WE CAN SUPPORT CLIMATE EFFORTS LOCALLY

To the Editor:

The Paris Climate Accord is an unprecedented opportunity for international cooperation toward planetary survival, by reducing the greenhouse gas emissions that cause climate change. Since Presi- dent Trump has shortsightedly withdrawn from this agreement, we must take upon ourselves the responsibility for pursuing its goals. Governors and mayors are pledging action on the state and local level. Individual citizens are stepping up, too.

One thing Parkway residents can do right now is support Community Choice Energy (CCE) for Boston. CCE means that a city chooses a broker to buy electricity in bulk for all of its residents and businesses. Many neighbor- ing towns already have CCE plans where electricity costs about the same as usual, but where more of it comes from renewable sources than is currently required by federal or state law. This means less greenhouse gas is released to the atmosphere.

(For more information, see communitychoiceboston.org, a website developed by a local non- profit.)

City Councilors Matt O’Malley and Michelle Wu are co-sponsoring an initiative to bring CCE to Boston, and discus- sions about it are underway at City Hall. Please contact Mayor Walsh (617-635-4500 or mayor@boston.gov) and tell him you support Community Choice Energy. Fighting global warming is up to us, and CCE is one im- portant step.

MEMORIAL DAY IS MUCH MORE THAN A CHANCE TO BARBECUE

To the Editor:

Good Morning: I bring you greetings from President Cheryl and all the members of the Ameri- can Legion Auxiliary, with a spe- cial reminder today, of why we should never forget: Another Me- morial Day is here. Maybe you put flowers and flags on a relative’s gravesite or watched your kids wave flags in a parade. You may have slept late or rose from bed early to get here, to prep for a barbecue. It is often said, but it is worth repeating, that Me- morial Day has, sadly, become more about the start of summer than the day of reflection, that is was intended. It is just sad that for many, thinking solemnly about or men and women who gave their lives in the Armed Forces is limited to just two days of the year; Memorial Day and Veterans Day. And regarding Memorial Day, for those of you who are too young to remember, some of us used to call it Decoration Day. It all started in 1868 when relatives of the Union Soldiers placed flowers to decorate the graves of those who died in the Civil War. Memorial Day did not become the more common name until af- ter World War II, and it was not declared the official name by fed- eral Law until 1967, and to be celebrated on the last Monday in May for all armed services and wars as a national holiday.

TARGET IS NOT A THREAT

To the Editor:

As a former Roslindale resi- dent, I often tried to shop down in and around Roslindale Square in support of the local commu- nity. However, I found the news that Target had targeted this retail area for its newest store plenty good news. With Staples leaving the site of the former Amsimont Discount store, I thought quickly filling the void with another retailer should have been considered positive news for all.

I was not surprised to hear that the owner of the Roslindale Village Market wasn’t that happy over Target moving in down the street from his market. He saw the grocery section inside the Tar- get as a threat to his business. Others didn’t like the idea of a CVS Pharmacy inside the Target store, too.

I do not think Target coming into the area is any kind of “cor- porate gentrification.” I don’t see it as pushing out the vitality of local businesses that have built up the area in the past 20 years or so.

While living in Roslindale, I did shop time to time down at the village market, but not that often because it doesn’t offer enough items that the larger supermarkets offer. Roslindale, down toward Forest Hills, has the village mar- ket and the Harvest Co-op. Many residents often drive to West Roxbury to purchase most of their groceries and any time an- other choice enters the picture, it should be and will be welcomed by those who go shopping. Com- petition is always good for prices as is the convenience of new source to buy groceries.

Finally, I shop in Target all the time but rarely, if ever, buy my groceries there. Nor will I be going to be forced to buy groceries sold at Target, but it being there might help some shoppers. Target can only stimulate the local economy of the retail stores already around the square. We need to stop being afraid of change. Target is not the enemy of anyone.

not have been happier with the turnout. “On behalf of my family and the Corrib Charitable Trust, I would like to thank the West Roxbury community, the runners, the sponsors and especially the volunteers,” he said. “We couldn’t do it without you.”
Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker, who attended the event, said he was amazed at the charitable work done in West Roxbury through the event. But he also asked the crowd for a moment of silence in remembrance of two local firefighters who lost their lives in a 2014 Back Bay Fire; recently, the tot lot on Fire; recently, the tot lot on fire. "I want to thank you all for a great race today. I would be running in this race, but unfortunately I have to go do the Dorchester Day, so I’m going to let one of you guys win." District 6 City Councillor Matt O’Malley said he’s run the race so many times, he’s not exactly sure of the real number. “At least 15 times,” he said. “I don’t know exactly how many times I’ve run it.” O’Malley said the event has become the de facto celebration of West Roxbury as a community. “We don’t have our own parade like we used to years ago and this really has become the celebration of the neighborhood,” he said. “I see guys and girls that I grew up with who moved out and come back just to run this. It’s really one of my favorite days of the year.” Resident Brian Bresnahan said he’s run the race a few times, but has been coming to the event since he was a kid. “I grew up here in West Roxbury, now I want to make sure that I’m here for my family and for a beautiful day.” he said.

Many residents came out to run and support their charities during the road race. Chef’s Table co-founder Carol O’Connor said she was racing to help the organization raise funds for scholarships for homeless veterans and underprivileged youths. She said this was her first time running for the Chef’s Table, but added she has had some previous experience with the route. “In the last 24 years, this is my eighth time,” she said. “I enjoy the workout, but also just to support the community where I grew up. The Chef’s Table Foundation has a team to support the foundation at the Corrib 5k this year, it’s our first time doing it and we hope we can raise funds.”

Several dozen women were running for the Run Like a Mother organization, which was fundraising this year for the Hope and Comfort group, which distributes toiletries for homeless families. Run Like a Mother member Antoinette Hemphill said the local group has really started to hit its stride in the community. “The first year we did the Corrib we had about a dozen of us but now we have a big team,” she said.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin Mary known to all
Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assuage me in this necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me how I am your mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh Mary, conceal not my prayer. I present this petition to your dispensation (three times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days and then you must publish and be blessed by you. Grateful thanks — C.H
